SAE hosts holiday workshops for young future creatives

SAE Creative Media Institute in Brisbane will open its doors to young aspiring filmmakers, gamers, animators, audio engineers and designers these school holidays.

The SAE Summer Series, running from 13 to 15 January, gives students aged 14 to 17 the chance to work on creative projects with lecturers and industry experts, using state-of-the-art facilities on campus.

SAE Brisbane Campus Manager Jeremy Butts said it was a great opportunity for young people to experience life on campus while creating something tangible for their portfolio or showreel.

"Most importantly, it's a great way to help students with their future study and career decision-making," he said.

While the animation and games workshops have sold out, there's still time for students to enrol in one of the following streams:

- Audio - studio production, electronic music production and live sound.
- Design - graphic design for print media and digital design for web and mobile devices.
- Film -pre-production, production and post-production techniques.

SAE Creative Media Institute is one of the world's leading creative media educators, with 54 campuses in 28 countries. In Australia, the Institute offers government-approved certificate, diploma and degree courses in Brisbane, Byron Bay, Sydney, Melbourne, Perth and Adelaide.

Tickets for the three-day SAE Summer Series in Brisbane are $150 including lunch. For more information and to book online for an audio, design or film workshop, visit www.sae.edu.au/events
